"In Exodus, isn't it?" replied Mr. Spoopendyke. "It sounds like Exodus. Where's the Bible?" "I was looking for it to-day," returned Mrs. Spoopendyke, getting up and preparing for another search. "I don't think it is in Exodus, because it sounds Taking Effect, Noy. 18, '83. more like Paul. I think some one must have stolen the Bible, for I haven't Don't you remember where you put it? Think it's in here?" and Mr. Spoopen-dyke upset the bandbox containing his wife's new hat, and then made a lunge stove. "You had it last, what did you do with it?"

"It wouldn't be apt to get in there, would it?" suggested Mr. Spoopendyke, trying to divert her husband's attention by rattling the vases on the bu-"If it's the orthodox Bible, it's liable to penetrate anywhere and every-where!" retorted Mr. Spoopendyke, abandoning the coal scuttle and making a dive for the button bag. "Strikes me that Bible is keeping pretty quiet for the Word," he ruminated as he tipped the buttons out on the floor, and darted across the room to try the bureau drawers. "Be in a fine fix if a minister should happen to drop in now and ask for family worship. Have to tell him to go on his recollection or start a new theory of his own," and Mr. Spoopen-dyke pulled the shams off the bed and then got down on his hands and knees to look under it. "I'll bet a hat it's where I said it was."

"We'll I should remark" tenlied "Well, I should remark," replied Mr. Spoopendyke, without meaning the slightest irreverence. "There may be only one small fish or a crust of the bread left, but we'll find what there is before we go to bed! Unless that Bible's gone to get itself revised there'll be no sleep in the Spoopendyke apartments until we lay our hands lovingly on that dear old family Bible! Maybe it's hid under a bushel!" and he capsized the waste paper basket and scattered the contents over the room. "I don't know but what it is in Exodus," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, with her finger in her mouth. "Now I come to think it over I'm sure it's in Exodus, so you needn't look for it any more."

"I know it's in Exodus," said Mr.
Spoopendyke, kicking his wife's work basket across the floor and turning the contents over with the toe of his boot. "But I'm going to find out which end of Exodus it is in before I go to business again! How do you suppose any one's to know when we were married or when the baby was born or when we eled if we don't find that Bible? Think I'm going through life without a Bible to refer to when I'm !snely and depressed? Got some kind of notion because I'm good and plous that religion as well as any one else! Where's that Bible?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke, rising in wrath as the book seemed to evade his search. "What's become of G U.A R. A N T K E D the pious injunctions of my youth?

How'm I going to be able to tell Solomon's wives from the rest of his family unless I have the book before me Where's my Maccabees and my Zaccheus? Where are the friends of my boyhood?" and Mr. Spoopendyke straightened up in the middle of the room and glared at his wife as though she had inflicted on him a mortal in-"They've been dead some time," replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, who always took everything literally. "Anyway, you don't care about them to-night." "And my Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob, and Jacob begat Judah and his brethren! Where are they? Suppose some fellow asks rie to-morrow who Judah's brethren begat, what am I to say? What're ye standing there for, looking like a hole in the fence for? Think that helps you

"Say, dear," commenced Mrs. Spoopendyks. "Don't you remember the night you and Mr. Specklewottle got into a dispute as to whether the prodigal son was thrown into the pit, or was the one whose ear Peter cut off for hiding his talents in a napkin? I haven't seen the Bible since then. You had it ont, and when you got through you put it in your silk hat, and here it is now!" and Mrs. Spoopend; he held up the missing volume, her face wreathed in smiles of delight that things had not been any worse.

"Found it, didn't you?" growled Mr.
Spoopendyke, snatching the book out of her hands. "Another time, when I get through with it, you remember what I do with it. Now, let's find that measly text you were so anxious about."

And Mr. Spoopendyke pored through Exodus and then laid down the book in disgust. "There's no such thing in the Bible," he said. "I knew there wasn't all the time, but I wanted to prove it to "Let me look," suggested Mrs.

Spoopendyke, and, turning to 1 Cor-inthians, vii:14, she found and read it to him. "I had an idea it was in some of Paul's writings," she remarked as she shut the book and put it away. "That's what you always have!" roared Mr. Spoopendyke, enraged by his defeat. "If you should ever run his defeat. "If you should ever run oring shop in the Spyby building and will short of ideas you'd be a comparatively keep on hand the best and latest styles of smart woman! Some day I m going to put a spiggot in your dod gasted mouth and start a public school with you, unless I change my mind and conclude to open a branch college for the prepation of married women for the lunatic asylum!" and immensely pleased with this business outlook Mr. Spoopendyke dropped his clothes in the middle of the floor for his wife to pick up and tumbled into bed. "I don't care," murmured Mrs. Spoopendyke, as she took down her back hair and serewed herself around to see if it reached to her waist. "I don't care. He can poke fun at me all he likes, and he can upset everything in the house, but I know that Mrs. Specklewottle wears a switch, and she can deny it all she wants to, she can't deceive me," and with this consolatory reflection Mrs. Spoopendyke popped into bed, and after thinking or awhile got up and puttered around in the dark, putting the room in order in case anything should happen to herself or husband in the night. "Here, now," said a mother to her little boy, "take this good medicine. It's sweet as sugar." "Mamma, I love little brother." the boy replied, "give it to him." - Arkansaw Traveler.
